THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910

In another column of this issue

Mr. John B. McPerran, that noble and good man who has on several occasions demonstrated to the public that he wants to help the children of our county, writes a letter concerning the improvement of the schools in Jefferson County. He says that he thinks that we believe to be a good one and which we trust the people will investigate.

The time has come when we must educate the children. We cannot afford to sit down and drift with the tide of indifference, stinginess and business, while our boys and girls are growing up in ignorance. Read Mr.

McPerran's article, and when the opportunity presents itself put in some effective work to bring about a betterment of conditions.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Education of Jefferson county a motion carried to divide up some among the eight educational divisions the money derived from the 1910 year of 20 cents on the $100. To the Jeffersonian this means that no consolidated or high school will be built this year. Patrons of several of the school districts in various parts of the county have expected a consolidated school to be built among them patrons of the Jeffersonian school that they begin thinking of something kind. Mr. McPerran and Mr. E. R.

Sprowl have been generous enough to offer to donate a school site in Jefferson Heights, and our people should raise money to build a good school upon the five acres to be given free. This district could well afford to have a graded school and we reason why the patrons should get together and have one. Of course, a school tax would have to be voted in order to maintain a graded school, but since we are now paying 20 cents and getting back about 5 cents of the money so raised, do you not think it would be better to vote a tax of 25 cents and get the benefit of all 42

Shall we hear from some patron of the school? Our columns are open and free for the discussion of any question that will help the children.

NOTICE.

The attention of the many readers of your paper and especially those interested in the Jeffersonian comment should be directed to the improvements made and being made by the trustees and subscribers in beautifying the same. They have just fastened a turnpike through the grounds that adds more to the looks than any thing done for years and is worth double the cost expended.

The lot owners should visit the cemetery, and while the spirit of improvement is at work lend the trustees their assistance in suggesting more work that is as greatly needed, such as building a tool house, etc.

Come out and assist them with your approval in taking care of the silent

SCHOOLS.

Division Board Meeting.

A called meeting of School Division Board No. 3 will be held in Jefferson town next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of selecting teachers for those schools that did not secure teachers at the last meeting. Extreme care and consideration should be exercised in this important work, as the teachers, in a sense, mould the characters of the children that are to compose the future generation and American manhood and womanhood.

Lost Locally.

The school committee of Salisbury,

New Hampshire, held a meeting one night to consider the purchase of New school books—one old man arrested, and with a wabble of his chin and a tremble in his voice he said:

"Didn't we study out o' these old books? Ain't what's good enough for us, good enough for our children?

What's the good o' all this book learnin' anyhow? What we need is some'n' practical.

"I mind the time when I used to come along the old north road and see Dan Webster up in his gable window with the lamp a-burnin' and him scribble and scribble out o' his books as nine o'clock at night.

"What did it all amount to? Why he went away from here and we never heard o' him afterwards."

The Jeffersontown Commercial committee presiding. The president, Mr. E. R. Sprowl, was absent, and there being only a small crowd pre-

E. Gose, was also absent and J. C.

A motion was made by J. C. Alcock

A Mountain Flower

BY ELDERE.

The ball and the fire were the sole topics of conversation during the breakfast hour. After the coffee had been served, the conversation had already adjourned to the front porch. Two hours later they were talking of Gladys and Nina. They were quite quiet with laughter and jests because of their late appearance.

"O, Nina, do open your eyes a little wider," teased Floyd. "They look for all like that. Chinese girls' eyes eyes we saw at the fair last year.

Gladys, your cheeks are as white as the rose in your hair."

"Yes, and I wonder if you are looking none the worse for the horrors of last night," answered Gladys, seating herself upon a footstool:

"But see you are as fresh and blooming as ever. I feared you would have to keep your bed for a day, or two, or, perhaps, have a long sleep of sickness."

"You are right, Floyd, with an utter disregard for grammar. 'No, indeed!

I'm not like the girls in novels, who if they get a little scorched, or fall ill, leave their lives, but not the brain fever and loss in delirium for weeks and weeks afterwards.

No, I'm not so frail as the heroine of a novel."

"But you are what I call a true heroine," said Larnie.

"And you and Fred are both heroes, for you have saved my life at the risk of your own," replied Floyd.

"But tell me, Gilman, why do you call me a heroine?"

"Did you not save the life of my friend, Walter Lloyd, when he was in danger of drowning? And when Floyd started and blushed. She had been thinking of him all the morning but she hesitated to ask about him.

"Yes, I saved his life, but not the risk of my own," she stammered.

"By the way, I wonder where Mr.

Lloyd is? The last I saw of him was when he came to see me at the ice cream parlour and-and-did he make no effort to find me when the fire broke out?" she finished, blushing violently.

"I do not remember having seen Walter during all the hub-bub," answered Larnie.

"Nor I," said Ned.

"Nor I," said the girls.

"This is very strange," said Floyd, picking a rose to pieces. "I should have thought, and I am very sure that I should have seen him. He should have been in the crowd, and he should have been in the crowd, and he should have been in the crowd, and he should have been in

Rev. Burger Resigns.

Rev. Wm. L. Burger has resigned the Jeffersontown, Ky. pastorate, which he has held since 1908. He is leaving for Jeffersontown and Mt. Zion Lutheran church over in the country near Middletown. Bro. Burger has offered his resignation to the people of the church by giving up his position here in our community, for the people of his charge are united, the people prosperous and everything in good shape. The only reason he assigns for the breaking of the ties that bind him and his people harmoniously, unitedly and lovingly is that Providence seems to have opened for him a larger field of labor.

His people of both churches give him up unwillingly, and have accepted his resignation with sorrow, regret and reluctance. In short they have accepted it only because it was the request of Bro. Burger that they should.

His people assure him that he will leave them with their good wishes, prayers and love. And they have his heartfelt thanks for the kindly considerations of him and his family, and for all the gifts and tokens of love bestowed during his ministry among them.

HORSE

Evidently Does Not Like Acres and Refuses To Eat, But All Right When in Neighbor's Barn.

Prestonia, July 3.—Much has been said about the horse's nature, but Dr. Sam Cochran has used every known means at his beautiful country home, "El Contento," to keep his fine driving horse in the barn. As soon as the horse is put in the stable he rears, plunges, kicks and refuses both food and drink, and the moment the doctor takes him across to his neighbor, Mr. Robin J. Durrett, the horse will become as docile as a lamb and eats his food and drink with relish.
